Mission

Money Smart Week is a national public education campaign coordinated by the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago and delivered by a network of several thousand partners.

The programs empower consumers with the knowledge and skills to make better informed personal finance decisions through access to free one-on-one coaching, seminars and interactive events.

In 2019, partners reported participation in nearly every state with attendance peaking slightly higher than last year. The broad support demonstrates the clear need for, and commitment to, free financial education.

Chicago Kick Off event guest shares a reason for being 'Money Smart'

Charlie Evans, Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago

“Money Smart Week is an opportunity for people to improve their financial confidence and decision-making. In its commitment to community outreach and engagement, this education campaign aligns with the greater goals of the Federal Reserve System to serve consumers and promote a strong U.S. economy.”

Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago

Partners

Money Smart Week is a volunteer-driven campaign that relied on over 3,800 partners in 2019. They designed and delivered classes on a wide range of topics, secured and donated space for events, coordinated planning teams and marketed events. They provided more than 12,000 hours to benefit our attendees across the country.

Our partners, using their own content and lesson plans, offered classes in saving money, filing tax returns, reducing debt and growing wealth, among other topics. Volunteer instructors included bankers, accountants, business owners and consumer finance teachers.

All generously gave their time, skills and knowledge. Other partners offered classrooms in libraries, offices and schools. Unbiased content, instructors and community settings are the building blocks of Money Smart Week.

“Money Smart Week is an opportunity for organizations to come together to make a difference in their communities. Partnering with banks, local businesses, universities, and other non-profits allows us to reach a large audience and offer a wide variety of free events that help people improve their understanding on a range of financial topics.”

– Michelle Stallmayer, Habitat for Humanity, Monticello, IL

“I really enjoy the opportunity to help people learn to take care of themselves from a financial point of view.”

– Gary Ball, Puget Sound Chapter of BetterInvesting, Seattle, WA

2019 attendance rose 10% year over year

Attendance By State

States with greatest increase in number of:

- Attendees
Iowa, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Virginia, Washington, West Virginia

- Events
Florida, Indiana, Missouri, Michigan, South Carolina, Wisconsin

“Incredible events come together because of the collaboration of organizations who are passionate about building financial capability in their community.”

– Marisol Martinez, Outreach Analyst, Community Engagement, Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas, TX

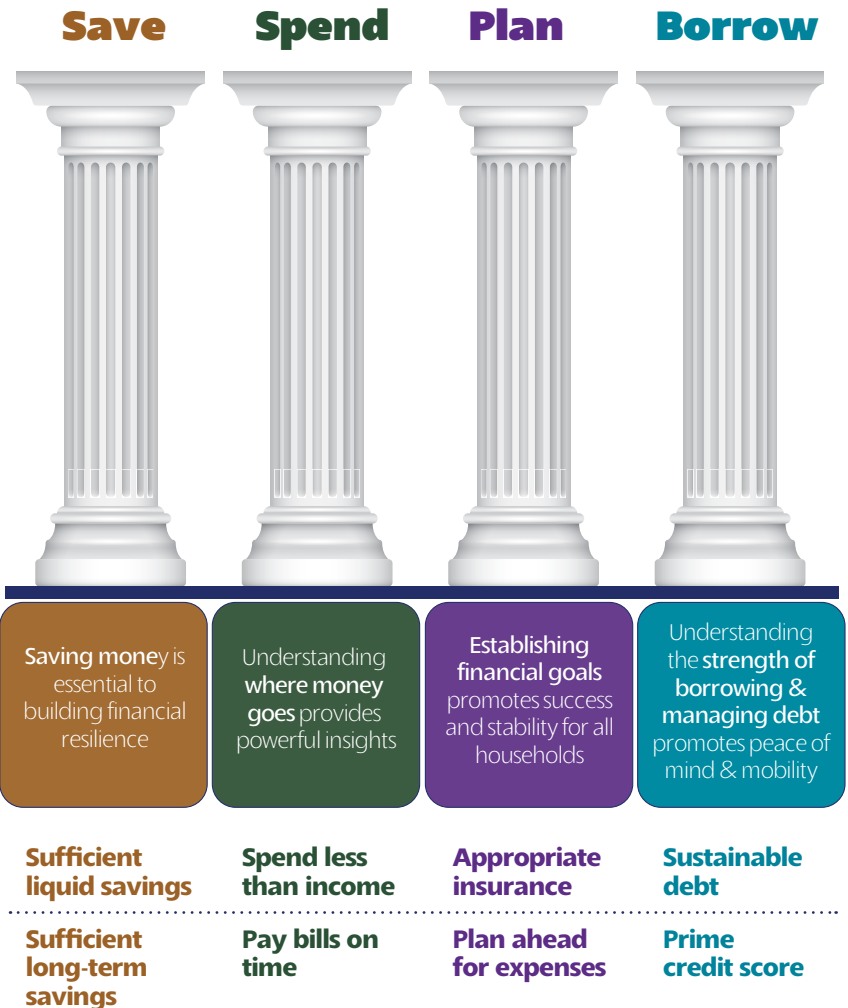

Building Capability

This year, Money Smart Week introduced four key pillars of financial well-being – save, spend, plan, borrow – to serve as a guide for building impactful events. This system was developed by the Financial Health Network, a research organization with a focus on improving financial wellness. The group’s studies indicate that 72% of people living in the U.S. are not financially healthy.

The four pillars create a framework that encourages people to target a specific area that plays a vital role in financial wellness. Money Smart Week partners will be asked to integrate these key ideas as they plan programs for our future campaigns.

KEY INDICATORS >>

“Americans can improve their financial well-being by committing to save. By starting with small amounts, people can, over time, improve their financial situation.”

– Kathy Kraninger,
Director of CFPB,
Washington D.C.

“I think it’s a good idea for adults and kids to talk about the best ways to spend money. We want to understand what we’re up against when we grow up and have even more responsibilities.”

– Amirah Harrington,
Money Smart Kid Finalist,
6th Grade, South Holland, IL

“Having hope for the future is the cornerstone of financial decision making. We all have wants and needs. But think: what can I do with this paycheck now that will put me in an even better place when I get the next one?”

– Barbara L. Martinez, Asset Building Programs Manager,
The Heartland Alliance,
Chicago, IL

“My goal for attending the event was to no longer feel the need to peek at my credit report with eyes half covered. How to Read a Credit Report not only gave me the knowledge to understand the information, but a nudge of confidence to face the situation.”

– Anonymous Attendee,
Center for Financial Empowerment, Roxbury, MA
